A Very Important Question What To Buy and Where To Buy It

To the lady of the house, to whom it falls to settle the first question three times each day for three hundred and sixty-five days, it is a hard question—but there is no shirking it. The hungry mouths must be fed; the food must be palatable and in proper variety, yet the cost must be considered.

This brings us to the second question, and here is where we think we can help the housewife. Logically the place to buy is the place which can suggest the easiest solution of the first question, and we can assure you that a glance at our shelves will save a lot of study as to what to have to eat.

We have assembled an assortment of eatables that will instantly suggest to you the meal you are to prepare, whether it be a lunch or a complete spread for some special occasion.

Canned Fruits, Vegetables, Meats, Etc., Pickles and Relishes, Dried Fruits, Fresh Fruits and Vegetables, and all the rest of the things necessary to prepare any meal for any time are here in almost endless profusion. Call and satisfy yourself and avail yourself of our up-to-the-minute service.

Life Is Just One Thing After Another

We didn't want to say it at all—but you know what we mean, anyway.

Baughman is gone, all right, as per schedule—but Cooper's home. We know he's home, too.

Hadn't much more than got him calmed down after telling about a million fibs when in walked a fellow, and with us a setting right there, said "hey, Earl, has your cousin come yet?" And there we was with him between us and the door. Say, it was awful, the way we felt.

And just to get up a conversation that would last until we could sneak out we asked the fellow if he had heard for sure whether or not they had found gas in the well west of town.

And say, that fellow must be some geologist, judging from the things he told us. According to his theory there has got to be gas and oil both right here under us. Here's the way he doped it out.

He said that when the world was first made everything was placed in it in apple pie order. There was stacks of iron and gold and lead and stuff piled right on the ground where it would be easy to get at. Then he said there was great lakes of oil right on the ground and that all the gas was in the hills where you could bore into it with a post auger and get it out. It is his theory that someone got to fooling with the gas and lit a match to find the leak and the bloomin' hills blew up, turning everything topsy turvy so the oil got buried and the iron and gold and gas and things. Now he figures out that there is oil and gas right here because he says it would be only sensible to put the gas and oil right here in the middle of the country where everybody would have it handy, so when the stuff exploded it went straight up and of course it would come down where it went up, so it's got to be right here close.

"What a pity John D. wasn't here when it was on top of the ground," said he, "so he could have scooped it all up in tank cars and saved all that drilling."

We figured that he was about through discoursin' on the prospects of finding oil here, and being satisfied that it is here ourself, we slipped out while Cooper was trying to digest the geological phenomena so elucidatingly related, and our life is spared another week.

And yet some people think that all the danger is in France and fail to appreciate the dangers that beset a mortal in this day and age, even out here in this peaceful country.
